

Marine and Energy

Aon Benfield Fac

The production of energy may offer great security to people and businesses across the world, but it also carries great risks. In a globalized economy, any interruption to the supply chain can have financial, political and legal consequences.

Therefore, it is vitally important that your energy project, whether it is refining, exploration and production, distribution and storage, mining, or any other facet of energy production, is covered against all risks and exposures.

Aon Benfield Fac is redefining the sector with a complete suite of solutions that address past, current and emerging issues in the Marine and Energy markets. A facultative Energy policy will ensure that your project can withstand the unexpected and can evolve in line with changing internal and external dynamics. Our Marine offering includes both customized and standard products, which address the full range of maritime risks.

In short, when it comes to comprehensive facultative Marine and Energy cover, we have the power to deliver – so you can deliver the power.
