

Incident Response

Containment & Eradication of Data Breach.
System Recovery.

What is this service?

In the event of a data breach, a lack of processes and technology to address the breach independently could jeopardise business continuity. Aon Cyber Solutions experts have intimate knowledge of legal procedures and in-depth investigations arising from such a breach. Our experts can help you communicate immediately and confidently, both internally and externally and can provide your in-house counsel with guidance needed to make difficult and sensitive legal calls.

How does it work?

Breaches present not only a technology problem but also a company-wide risk problem. We'll give you a quick-acting team of incident responders, forensic examiners, former regulators, and law enforcement officials. Your breach response team will undertake rapid remote support, then work onsite to understand what happened.

Why is it important?

Every minute a data breach goes uncontained, it can cost potentially millions. Organisations must ensure they have a responder they can trust – one that will maintain strict privilege and proper information custody and one that can work together with in-house and outside counsel to get specialist guidance to make difficult and sensitive legal calls with confidence. The result will be less damage, and ultimately less reputational and financial fallout.

Why Us?

Go-To Firm for Cyber Security

As a leading firm in the cyber security testing and incident response space, we've responded to 90 percent of the highest profile breaches in the last decade¹. Our experience from years in the trenches informs our work. This experience, together with our advanced threat intelligence capabilities, allows us to keep abreast of the latest attack vectors, how cyber attacks are perpetrated, and how to stop them.
